Promoting safe child faeces management in Solomon Islands

Picture cards for formative research data collection

June 2020
Purpose of this tool

This is a data collection tool developed for the research project Promoting Safe Child Faeces Management in Solomon Islands led by the International WaterCentre in partnership with the Solomon Islands National University and the London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine; and funded by the Australian government, under the Water for Women Fund.

The tool comprises a set of picture cards to be used during focus groups discussions with participants. The illustration represent different situations and scenarios related to daily activities and child faeces management in rural Solomon Islands.

These illustrations were drawn by Solomon Islands artists and were used during formative research data collection activities in rural communities.

The picture cards are arranged in three sections: (i) daily routine activities, (ii) child faeces management practices, and (iii) pictures depicting motives and emotions.

If you would like to use these illustrations, please get in touch with us (contact details at the end of this document) and credit them as:
